Cl. 171                   DISCUSSION – MARINE SAFETY WITH MR BARRY DAVIES

13.12.17                 Mr Davies was welcomed by the Chairman and started the discussion by explaining the size of the area he was responsible for, with Gwynedd having one of the largest coastlines of any region within the UK. Although he conceded that times were financially challenging, he also made it clear that his service and Gwynedd in general was proud of Tywyn and considered it to have one of the county's flagship promenades.

Mr Davies referenced the ways in which Tywyn seafront has changed in recent years following the construction of the breakwater, meaning that Tywyn now has an almost perpetually sandy beach.

Mr Davies explained the difference between the Beach Wardens and Lifeguards and said that the difference in cost of providing a Lifeguard was prohibitive.

It was explained that new safety signage should have been in place for 2017 however technical issues between the designer and the printer had forced this to be delayed. We are assured that new safety signs will be on the beach by 1st April 2018.

The signs are as a result of a collaboration between his department and the RNLI, they will only detail beach safety guidelines as it was felt that including boating regulations on the same sign may cause confusion.

It was explained that buoys marking a safe operating distance from the shore for personal watercraft would not be deployed in Tywyn due to the westerly facing nature of the shore which meant that the buoys would not stay in place, this would open the authority up to potential liability. Mr Davies explained that all boat users launching in Gwynedd needed to be registered and display a registration number. This would mean that they had seen and signed the boating regulations which included a requirement to maintain a speed below 4 nautical miles per hour whilst within 100m of the tide line.

It was conceded that outside of the Warden's operational hours it was possible for unregistered boats to launch.

The Paddling Pool is emptied and filled everyday during the summer weeks but Gwynedd do not have the resources to manage it throughout the year.

Mr Davies praised the activities of Tywyn Events.

Councillor Frank Bridle asked if there was a remedy for the fact that the slipway had become dangerously steep due to the sand that has built up at the bottom and whether there would be some way of restricting the general public's access to the slipway when boats are being launched or landed. The response was that this would be difficult to manage but that Mr Davies would look at the situation.

Councillor Quentin Deakin felt that the failure of some watercraft owners to adhere to the regulations might be solved by greater enforcement however as Mr Davies explained, the regulations are simply good practice and Gwynedd had no right to enforce compliance. In 12 - 18 months' time, however, there would be a review of the county's byelaws and specific laws could be enacted at this point.

Councillor Ron McCoo requested that benches be left at each end of the prom. Mr Davies warned that they may not survive the winter storms but agreed to look at it.

Councillor Anne Lloyd-Jones thanked Mr Davies for his and his team's commitment and hard work. Councillor Lloyd-Jones also queried works to be undertaken on the Victorian Shelter and mentioned the fact that boats launching from Ceredigion would not be covered by Gwynedd regulations.

Councillor Mike Stevens reiterated the Council's concern regarding the Victorian Shelter and asked whether volunteers could manage the paddling pool over Whitsun. Mr Davies thought that this would probably not be allowable due to insurance requirements but said he would give consideration to opening the pool for the Spring Bank Holiday.

Councillor Frank Bridle asked whether a jetty could be considered and whether the slipway at the opposite end of the prom would be a safer option for launching. Mr Davies felt that current resources would prohibit the building of a jetty but would look at whether the other slipway was a viable alternative.

Councillor Aled Lewis asked how many full-time staff worked in the Maritime department and that the maintenance budget was for the beaches. Mr Davies will provide budgetary information and stated that there were 7 full-time staff members.
